

Arcopedico Offers Tall Boots with Heightened Awareness

BioCalce, Dual-Arch, Washable Boots Designed with Environment, Comfort, Convenience in Mind

Arcopedico, makers of high-quality, hand-made comfort shoes, kicks some sense into tall boots for Fall/Winter 2012 – 2013 with a line offering comfort, convenience and eco-consciousness.

Featuring the Arcopedico brand's signature patented twin-arch and anatomical soles, the tall boots also showcase the versatile Lytech® material, a patented fabric that is machine-washable, vegan, water resistant and BioCalce® Certified as environmentally-friendly. The Lytech line is also perfect for travel due to its flexible, lightweight and breathable nature, which gives the “barefoot” sensation of freedom and healthy circulation on the top of the foot.

Back by popular demand, the stylish riding-style L31 boot (pictured right, MSRP: $175) is now available in black with a matte finish, in addition to the previous glossy brown and black styles. Convenient and customizable back laces allow easy and comfortable wearing and removal, while the Sansmell™ technology provides moisture-wicking, anti-microbial protection for the foot.

Meanwhile, the Liana (at left, Brown or Black, MSRP: $179 ), featuring the machine-washable, water resistant, “green” certified and vegan Lytech material, is as fashionable as it is practical for winter. Stylish ruching and decorative buttons along the sides make the boot appropriate for work or play, while the soft, flexible, lightweight fabric and full-length zipper make it comfortable and convenient for winter travel. The innovative Sansmell™ system offers an anti-microbial buffer to help keep the boots clean and fresh.

For extra comfort this winter, the Milan 2 tall boot (pictured at right, MSRP: $130) can be folded down for a cool cuffed look that shows off the cozy faux-fur lining inside. With a Lytech exterior, a weather-ready sole, and twin-arch support, the Milan 2 is the ultimate in comfortable, casual boot wear.
